TOWN COUNCIL

Council Chamber,
April 16th, 1917

Council met in regular session on Monday evening.

On motion Coun. John Lowry was elected Chairman.

Mayor Denison is ill, and Reeve Graham was unavoidably absent on a mission to Kingston.

Present—Councillors Spencer, Hunter, Gibbard, Robinson.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

The following communication was read from A. E. Paul:

Napanee, April 12th

The Municipal Clerk,
Town of Napanee,

Dear Sir,—

Please bring before the Council the following communication:

"I am acting purchaser of the grounds known as the Lennox Agricultural Grounds. It is my intention to sell a few lots off this and improve the balance in the near future. The thought has occurred to me that as the east end of the water front is the only place in the immediate vicinity of Napanee for bathing, and is also at the beginning of the best boating ground for canoes and small boats that the town might want the control of this corner to be used as a public park. This is an ideal spot for tennis croquet, and as above stated for bathing and boating. I propose making it into such a place with boat-house, bathing house, and pavilion, but as it takes money, more than we feel like putting in at present, I thought of offering it first to the town. Again, the centre of the race track is, as you know, a bed of rocks. It is suggested that these stones be quarried out until the bed is lower than the bed of the river, at low water. Then to make a drain from the east end through this pond to the river near the bridge. This would form a pond, the water continually running. In this it is proposed to place a few fish, or something that will be an attraction to visitors. It is thought that if the town buys the stone for walks and roads the expense of this will be nearly met, and the town not be the loser in any way.

If the town wishes to take this matter up before any further action is taken, I shall be very glad to discuss the matter with them. The plans are all in a crude state, as yet, except that the ground has been purchased and is available.

A. E. PAUL.

A special committee composed of Coun. Gibbard, Coun. Spencer, Reeve Graham, and Coun. Robinson, was appointed to investigate and report.

In a communication the Town Solicitor informed the council that in his

And as steadfastly as this car has represented ORIGINAL integrity of value, so also has Willys-Overland, Limited, SUSTAINED that integrity of value throughout its service in the hands of those who purchased it.

More than three hundred thousand owners and more than four thousand dealer and factory-branch organizations have assisted this development by their experience with these cars and their helpful suggestions of improvements.

W. J. NORMILE.

Coun. Giffard, Coun. Spencer, Reeve Graham, and Coun. Robinson,' was appointed to investigate and report.

In a communication the Town Solicitor informed the council that in his opinion street watering costs could be collected out of the general funds.

Ordered filed.
A communication was read from the National Sanitarium Association asking for a grant.

Ordered filed.
A resolution was passed that the tenders for town supplies, except those for street watering, be laid on the table until next meeting of council, and that the street watering tenders be referred to the Streets Committee with power to act.

There were three tenders for street watering, and were as follows: John Chatterton, both sprinklers, at $4.00 per day each; T. Killorin, one team at $5.00 per day, and Geo. Grieve one team at $5.00 per day.

The Streets Committee reported considerable trouble with the West street sewer, but they were in hopes that the Wm. Davies Co. would reimburse the town for cost of labor and repairing same. The bill of damage claimed by Mr. D. Davis, and the bill of the town for work on the sewer would be sent to the Davies Co. and would altogether likely be paid by them. In the matter of the damage claim of Mr. Ernest English for death of his horse, and damage to cutter and harness, the Committee reported that he wanted $200 to settle. The Committee could not get any information as to the accident, but thought it advisable to settle. The Committee were making arrangements to put metal on the street running west from Centre to the Iron Works.

Report received and adopted.

Coun. Spencer reported in reference to a family who had recently moved to town from Belleville. He stated the mother was ill, the daughter had contracted pneumonia, and there was also two small children in the family. He had given them two orders for provisions, one for $3.00 and another for $5.00. He wanted to know what the council's wishes were in the matter.

He was instructed to call his Committee together and thoroughly investigate the case. They were also given power to act.

On motion of Coun. Robinson and Spencer the Clerk was instructed to prepare a Street Sprinkling By-Law in which would be named the streets to be sprinkled this year. The streets will probably be as follows: Dundas from Bridge to Hesford, Bridge from Adelphi to Church of England corner, Market Square, Centre from railway tracks to Mill, John from railway tracks to Mill, East from railway tracks to Dundas. These are all through thoroughfares and will probably be watered under the Local Improvement Act.

A Special Committee composed of Reeve Graham and Coun. Lowry was appointed and given power to affect a settlement with Mr. Ernest English in his $200 damage claim.

W. J. NORMILE.

Coun. Gibbard, Coun. Spencer, Reeve Graham, and Coun. Robinson, was appointed to investigate and report.

In a communication the Town Solicitor informed the council that in his opinion street watering costs could be collected out of the general funds.

Ordered filed.

A communication was read from the National Sanitarium Association asking for a grant.

Ordered filed.

A resolution was passed that the tenders for town supplies, except those for street watering, be laid on the table until next meeting of council, and that the street watering tenders be referred to the Streets Committee with power to act.

There were three tenders for street watering, and were as follows: John Chatterton, both sprinklers, at $4.00 per day each; T. Killorin, one team at $5.00 per day, and Geo. Grieve, one team at $5.00 per day.

The Streets Committee reported considerable trouble with the West street sewer, but they were in hopes that the Wm. Davies Co. would reimburse the town for cost of labor and repairing same. The bill of damage claimed by Mr. D. Davis, and the bill of the town for work on the sewer would be sent to the Davies Co. and would altogether likely be paid by them. In the matter of the damage claim of Mr. Ernest English for death of his horse, and damage to cutter and harness, the Committee reported that he wanted $200 to settle. The Committee could not get any information as to the accident, but thought it advisable to settle. The Committee were making arrangements to put metal on the street running west from Centre to the Iron Works.

Report received and adopted.

Coun. Spencer reported in reference to a family who had recently moved to town from Belleville. He stated the mother was ill, the daughter had contracted pneumonia, and there was also two small children in the family. He had given them two orders for provisions, one for $3.00 and another for $5.00. He wanted to know what the council's wishes were in the matter.

He was instructed to call his Committee together and thoroughly investigate the case. They were also given power to act.

On motion of Coun. Robinson and Spencer the Clerk was instructed to prepare a Street Sprinkling By-Law in which would be named the streets to be sprinkled this year. The streets will probably be as follows: Dundas from Bridge to Hesford, Bridge from Adelphi to Church of England corner, Market Square, Centre from railway tracks to Mill, John from railway tracks to Mill, East from railway tracks to Dundas. These are all through thoroughfares and will probably be watered under the Local Improvement Act.

A Special Committee composed of Reeve Graham and Coun. Lowry was appointed and given power to affect a settlement with Mr. Ernest English in his $200 damage claim.

LENS WILL SOON FALL

City Is Now Virtually Invested by British.

Germans Are Making Desperate Efforts to Hold Positions Round It and Suffered Frightful Losses in Counter-attack, but Capture of Great French Mine Centre is Hourly Expected.

LONDON, April 17.—Apparently the city of Lens, the great coal centre of northern France, has fallen before the British drive. The night official report speaks only of progress "east of Lievin, where our troops are approaching the outskirts of Lens."

But the correspondents of Lloyd's news with the British army telegraphs that British patrols entered the city between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning, and other correspondents tell of incidents indicating that the Germans have abandoned the town, and that the British are walking into it.

The German trench system along the slag heaps in front of the city has been practically pulverized by the blast-fire from General Horne's batteries. East of the city they have another network of trenches in which it is believed they may make a temporary stand before retiring to the supplementary Hindenburg line between Drocourt and Queant.

While British guns were plowing a way to turn the northern hinge of the Hindenburg line at Lens, the German Field Marshal let loose against the British wedge threatening the southern hinge the most powerful blow he has delivered since the beginning of his wide withdrawal. It failed completely.

Along a six-mile front on both sides of the Bapaume-Cambrai high road he concentrated the artillery fire of a great park of field pieces and then launched a succession of heavy infantry attacks. The Germans succeeded in penetrating Lagnicourt, which is practically the centre of the British fighting front. Haig's men quickly rallied, however, and drove the enemy out in disorder, capturing three hundred prisoners at the same time, making a total of 700 prisoners during the week-end. The British line Sunday night stood where it did before, and 1,500 German dead have been counted in the area just beyond.

This general engagement and decisive defeat is noteworthy, because it indicates that the Germans, with all the advantage on their side, are unable to stem the British tide. Noreuil is just west of Queant, the strong bastion of the second line of defence, along which the Germans have massed their heavy and light artillery. There is a striking contrast between this action and the performance of the British two days ago, when they made their wide gains along the Metz-Hargicourt sector. Though exceedingly well provided with artillery, both powerful and mobile, Prince Rupprecht's first thrust in what the Germans call "the war of movement" must be recorded as a costly failure. The Berlin night report makes no claim on success, merely stating: "There has been lively fighting north of the Bapaume Cambrai road."

DREW TURKS TO DOOM

Real Strategical Retreat Made by General Maude.

Ottoman Armies Thought the Invaders Had Been Halted, but in the Desperate Battle That Followed the British Inflicted Enormous Losses and the Enemy Fled in Panic.

LONDON, April 17.—The Turks have sustained another defeat at the hands of the British in Mesopotamia. The War Office announces that the Turks are in retreat after a battle in which they suffered heavy losses.

The Turks were driven from their positions near Ghaliyeh, 35 miles north of Bagdad. They then withdrew toward Seraijik, and thence toward Dely Abbas. The British are pursuing the Turks. On Wednesday the Turks lost 200 killed and 700 wounded.

The British have wrecked the plan of the Turks to halt the invading armies. An official British statement on Tuesday said the Turks were preparing a converging movement against the British between the Adheim and Dalia rivers. It is in this region that the fighting now reported occurred.

The official statement reads: "On April 10 General Maude (the British commander) withdrawing his advanced detachments on the right bank of the Dalia River, succeeded in drawing the bulk of the enemy forces on this flank in a south-westerly direction, toward Deltawah. At night our forces made a night march from the neighborhood of the left bank of the Tigris towards the Dalia, and attacked the next morning.

"The fighting had to be temporarily suspended, owing to the mirage, but upon this lifting our offensive continued. Our guns, with the able assistance of our aeroplanes, rapidly asserted their superiority. Later in the evening the enemy was driven from his advanced positions near Ghaliyeh, ten miles north-east of Deltawah.

"Early on the morning of April 12 the enemy withdrew six miles in a north-easterly direction to Seraijik. Successful operations continued throughout the day and night, and General Maude on the 13th reported:

"We are following up the Turkish forces, which are falling back toward Dolys Abbs. It is ascertained that the Turks lost 700 wounded during fighting of April 11, and on that day 200 Turkish dead were found on the battlefield. Our total losses this day approximately equal the Turkish killed."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

Winnipeg, April 16.—The market made a three-cent advance in the last few minutes today. Considerable buying was credited to the government during the day, but all was well under cover. One of the chief factors of the strength was the decrease in the American visible of over 3,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Wheat closed with an advance of 10½c in May, 8½c in July and 4½c in October.

Oats gained 1½c in May, 1½c in July and ¾c in October. Barley was 1c higher.

Flax gained ¾c in May and July.

Wheat touched new high records on the local exchange today. The trade was small, with pit business exceedingly difficult, but the millers and exporters seemed to have complete control, and the whole situation was very tight. The cash market suffered from the government agents dropping out, and premiums faded away, with absolutely no buyers for some of the grades. Oats and flax were steady throughout the day.

The German thrust did not check British progress either at St. Quentin, where ground was gained east and north of Gricourt, or forty-five miles away at Lens. With the capture of that city the French will be in a position once more to meet their acute coal shortage, which, to an extent, has interfered with the manufacture of munitions.

French artillery continues to heavily bombard the city.

The Belgian troops Saturday night penetrated Dixmude as far as the second German lines, which they found vacated. Heavy artillery fighting was reported on the entire Belgian front.

The Reuter correspondent at British Headquarters, gives an interesting story of how the British officials studied beforehand a small model of Vimy Ridge, moulded by an ingenious officer out of plaster, indicating every natural texture, the trenches, railways, defences, roads and streams, even the mine craters, prepared from aerial photographs and direct observations, and all available local knowledge that could be obtained, and that knowledge thus gained proved of immense advantage when the attack was carried out.

Many Battles in the Air.

LONDON, April 17.—Fighting in the air between the German and French and British aviators continues. Berlin tells of the loss by "the French, British, and Americans" of 17 aeroplanes. Sunday four German aeroplanes were brought down by British fliers, and 11 others were driven down. Ten British machines failed to return to their base. The Paris War Office reports that French aviators in the last three days of the past week accounted for 25 German aeroplanes and a captive balloon. Both the British and French airmen have carried out notable bombing exploits on German positions behind the line.

Owing to general pairs and absentees only 389 votes were recorded for the bill, but both Democratic Leader Kitchin and Republican Leader Mann announced that all of their members would have voted affirmatively if they had been present.

The bill authorizes $5,000,000,000 in bonds, of which $3,000,000,000 will be loaned to Entente countries, and the issuance of Treasury certificates for $2,000,000, ultimately to be met by increased taxation. Passage of the measure never was in doubt during the two days it was under consideration in the House, and favorable action by an overwhelming vote is assured in the Senate, where it will be taken up Monday. It probably will be signed by the President by the middle of this week.

To Aid the Serbians.

HAMILTON, April 17.—The Serbian Relief Committee of this city realized $7,770 as the result of its Tag Day effort held Saturday. The amounts in the collection box totaled $6,346 and cheques to the value of $1,424 were sent to the treasurer, C. W. Cartwright. The objective was $10,000, and as the contributions of the factory employees will not be received until next week the committee is confident that the sum aimed at will be reached. The managers of the local theatres Saturday afternoon allowed the workers to go through the play-houses, thereby helping materially to swell the amount turned in by the collectors last evening.

HELSINKI, Russia, April 17.—A. F. Kerensky, Russian Minister of Justice, was present at Friday's meeting of the Finnish Diet, and in a speech greeting the "free Finnish people" in the name of the Provisional Russian Government declared Russia would do everything in its power to make it certain that Finland could remain free forever. The Speaker of the Diet, M. Tolman, requested M. Kerensky to inform the Russian people of the Diet's gratitude for the fraternal greetings. He said henceforth a complete agreement on the basis of reciprocal confidence would prevail between the two peoples.

Lille is the Key.

LONDON, April 17.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's principal object in his advance on Lens, is rather to turn La Bassée from the south, La Bassée and Lens forming the outworks of Lille, which is the key to the whole German position in Flanders, and once these two towns are in the hands of the British, Lille will be seriously threatened.

Volume and Prices in Trade.

The London Economist has calculated the United Kingdom's import and export trade for 1916, in terms of the prices prevailing in foreign trade in 1915. While total imports in 1915 were $4,459,000,000 and in 1916 $4,746,000,000, yet the imports of 1916, if valued in 1915 prices, were only $3,715,000,000—indicating an actual falling off in volume from the preceding year. Exports and re-exports increased in value from $2,420,000,000 in 1915 to $3,020,000,000 in 1916, but last year's exports in 1915 prices were only $2,507,000,000.

RAIDING HUN TRENCHES

OUR OWN SOLDIERS PERFORM
DARING DEED.

A Scientific Plan Carried Out With Coolness and Courage Accounted for About 350 of the Enemy, and
Our Own Casualties Were Not Very Heavy.

THIN snow, hardened by frost—woe to sandbags and parapets when the thaw begins!—still covers the battleground, and a white mist blurs the landscape of war. Haystacks in fields on the edge of the fighting world are topped with snow so that they look like sugar loaves, and flocks of rooks make black blots on all this whiteness.

It is upon this picture that our soldiers look out from their billets in French farmyards, and across the snowfields they go trudging on their way to the trenches, or over No Man's Land when they are out for one of those raids which happen now almost every day at some part of the line.

The full narrative of the Canadian raid near Calonne is well worth more than the few lines already sent about it, because of its complete mastery of method, and the grim human interest of it, and its lessons. From the men who did the job—fine, clear-eyed, straight-thinking men—I have heard every detail, and although there is much I must leave out because the Germans would like to know, I can tell enough to give the spirit of it.

The Canadians were preparing the surprise with scientific industry and patience. A brigadier and his staff officers and company officers were studying every feature of the German position from every angle of observation.

The men selected for the raid, picked men, were trained for the task so that each one of them knew exactly what he was required to do, the time in which he had to do it, and the place in the German lines where with luck he should find himself.

They were even taught some words of German—kommen sie heraus, konst wollen wir handgranaten werfen! (come out, or we will throw down bombs)—so that they could get prisoners more easily. It was a complete education in the art of attack, which is not a gentle art.

To save the lives of our own men, as well as to kill or capture the enemy is the test by which the success of a raid is judged. The Canadians were not out to lose men but to save them. "The cheapest possible price," was the brigadier's bargain with his officers, and he is a good soldier.

Our artillery was bombarding north-west of Lens, and the enemy was nervous in that direction, keeping his own guns ready for an attack up there. One or two minor raids in different directions distracted his attention and worried him.

Things were boiling up southward by a ruined house in his lines. He sent up reserves of men to strengthen the support lines and assembly trenches along this line of front. He tion depended many men's lives. The answer was as good as gold to the Canadians trudging through the snow.

All that broad belt of wire was down. Great lanes had been smashed through it by our shrapnel. The gates were open into hostile country and the Canadians streamed through, entering the enemy's front line just four minutes after the scramble over the British parapets. Pretty quick work for all that distance of No Man's Land.

The second wave passed through the first, and went on to the second line without halting. There was some bombing on the left flank, but it was not important. Seven German bombers flung a few grenades, and then disappeared into a hole, from which they were taken later.

In the second line of trenches there was hardly a fight. The inhabitants of dugouts came out quickly in answer to German words shouted down by men in khaki. It was not very good German, but it was understood.

For an hour the Canadians remained in the enemy's trenches, collecting booty and prisoners, and papers. No German barrage had yet fallen upon them. The enemy's guns were still plugging away at the wrong place. No machine-gun fire enfiladed them. They had complete mastery of their ground.

By their synchronized watches the men knew the time to return, and, carrying their wounded, they made their way back. Afterwards the enemy barraged their own front line; but no men were there except the German dead.

This, as far as I can tell it, is the narrative of the Canadian raid, planned in a scientific way, and carried out with a cool courage. It accounted for about 350 of the enemy and our own casualties were not heavy.

Canada's Fighters Filmed.

Every man, woman, and child through the length and breadth of Canada should make a point of seeing the latest war films from the Canadian front. Far clearer than any preceding films of the kind, these wonderful scenes from the Canada's battlefield bring vividly home to the audience winter work in the war. One scene shows German shells bursting in plain sight on our trenches while the erstwhile occupants gaze interestedly on Fritz's wasted work from a safe place close at hand. Marvellously realistic, too, are the tanks, every portion of them in plain view, as with big guns manipulating they pursue their course over all obstacles.

Canada's movie pictures from the front have no superiors. Canada's movie photographers have no rivals in daring. Some of the pictures were taken in the heat of battle, where the air was literally full of flying death, and the operator in terrible danger every moment. Imagine standing out on No Man's Land in an action, "screening" the advancing soldiers, snapping Hun prisoners, the while shells burst in close proximity and bullets "whiplash" past in showers! Perched on the top of a parapet, hiding in a shell-hole, manipulating an instrument which the Boche is as likely as not to take for a machine gun and act accordingly, is the portion of these daring movie men, whose work at such times is really more dangerous than that of the soldiers them-

To the War With an Ambulance

ONE of the prominent Canadian University men who accompanied the first army from the Dominion to the trenches in France was William Boyd, Professor of Pathology in the University of Manitoba. He has recently published a book giving his impression of the front, and it is one that should prove interesting because of its intimate personal touch.

Professor Boyd has not written a war book such as the special correspondent turns out. "With a Field Ambulance at Ypres" is in reality a diary, written in the kitchens of French farmhouses, in muddy dug-outs, and other romantic places from time to time, and then sent home to give friends an idea of what was going on. In most cases the accounts were written within twenty-four hours of the events described, which of course adds to their value.

Professor Boyd gives one of the most graphic stories of the effects of the gas when first used that has been written. His description is dated April 28th, 1915, the day that will be long remembered by the Canadians because of the introduction of the new and ghastly mode of warfare. Professor Boyd says:

"There is only one word in the mouth of every one to-day—gas. Vague rumors of gas have been floating about, but no one really believed them. Now the stage of rumor is past, and we know the worst. And a very bad worst it is.

"This morning I had to go to one of the casualty clearing stations, and there I saw a sight which for sheer ghastliness equals anything to be seen in any dressing station. The hospital is built around a great courtyard, and in that courtyard were two hundred men on stretchers. Some were lying in a state of stupor, the flies buzzing about their faces; some were sitting up gasping for breath, with hands and faces of a deep, dusky hue, evidently in the greatest distress; over the countenance of others the pallid hues of death were beginning to creep, whilst a few had fallen back and with gurglings in the throat were passing away into the undiscovered country. They were the first gas cases from Ypres and Hill 60.

"The description of the gas varied to an extraordinary extent. It was described as black, brown, yellow, green, and white. Some said that it came from large hose pipes attached to cylinders, others that it was contained in hand grenades, others that it came from shells fired from field guns, and still others that a fluid was sprayed on to the trenches, which was then ignited by fire-shells. There seems to be little doubt that all four methods were employed. It is also probable that different gases were used at different parts of the line. Most of it was brown like bromine, some yellow or green like chlorine, and the black fumes may have been due to the ignition of some fluid such as benzol. It was quite impossible to see or breathe in this gas, and even when the men got out of it the lungs and heart were the support lines and assembly trenches along this line of front. He still had forty feet of "knife rests" as a great protection.

To the Canadians it was all a question of that belt of wire. Could the guns make lines through it? The guns got to work, and poured shrapnel on the entanglements. But neither the forward observing officers nor the staff officers, nor the company officers, were quite certain that the wire had been cut well enough for men to walk through. It was impossible to see through the white mist. Men were told off as wire cutters. Ultimately they might have to depend upon hand-work to open the gates, increasing the risks a thousand-fold.

The attack was in the daylight on a Thursday morning. The men themselves preferred the light. It had been snowing all night and there were four inches of snow on the ground. The Canadians liked that also, as it gave them a "homely" feeling.

"They went over with bombs strapped to their chests to have their hands free, with empty sandbags to bring back documents from German dugouts, with wire-cutters on their bayonets. They were mostly young men from 18 to 22. Only a few of them had been 'over the top' before. But they went with cool heads, without hurry or any wildness of excitement upon this adventure, which would mean death for some of them. Some of them certainly, though the price was to be cheap.

The shells of many guns were in a flight over their heads, flinging a straight, steady barrage upon the German lines. Up by the Double Crassier, nearly a mile to the north of them, there was a big bombardment. It extended southward. Smoke barrages were rolling across the snow, uniting with the white mist so that the Canadians were boxed in and invisible.

Somewhere near Lens a mine was blown, and it shook the earth with its roar. Rockets, mostly green, rose above the smoke and the mist, and floated like toy balloons. The German artillery crashed out in an answering barrage, but nowhere near the raiders, who were walking at quick march across No Man's Land 160 yards wide, to the salient in the German lines.

Some of them, the officers especially were listening for the patter of machine gun bullets. This ground was surely enfiladed by machine guns. There were a few bursts of machine-gun fire.

"We've got it!" thought one of the officers. A few men dropped. "Steady there!" shouted the sergeants. Unwounded men halted and stooped to give first aid to their comrades. It was the law of the heart dead against the laws of war, which have nothing to do with that.

The machine gun—somewhere south of the Slag Heap—rapped out a new burst of bullets. Then the chatter of it stopped, for a reason only known afterwards, when the "heavies" claimed a direct hit, or at least a silence. There was no more machine-gun fire.

Not one burst of bullets came from those places marked on the maps. The guns had smothered them. "Good old guns—" said the Canadian soldiers, and they felt very confident with the creeping barrage ahead of them. And not very far ahead, either.

The great query had still to be solved. How about the "knife-rest" wire? Upon the answer to the question these daring movie men, whose work at such times is really more dangerous than that of the soldiers themselves.

Rights to these films taken under the auspices of Sir Max Aitken's department, the Canadian War Records Office, were sold by Sir Max for $20,000 cash, which sum he turned over to the Canadian War Memorial Fund. This purchase sum it has been arranged that the company may recover from the profits, but after its reimbursement, the film company is required to give any profits over and above working expenses to the above-named fund.

Commends "Dry" Canada.

Bishop Perrin, of Willesden, formerly Bishop of British Columbia, writing to The London Chronicle on prohibition, pronounced it as practical a political act as had been done in Canada. "Oh, yes, people say, but Canada is so different from England. My answer to that is," writes the Bishop, "have you been there? I do not mean a trip for a month, but have you lived in Canada as I have for eighteen years?

"Prohibition was no easier there than at home, yet to-day from the Atlantic to the Pacific it has been accepted in every Province with the exception of Quebec, which is nearly dry, because the people have seen that the war demanded it.

"Every argument used here was used there with far more strongly vested interests, and all the rest of it. That, they said, can never be, but it has come to pass. When history comes to be written, shall it be said when Canada with its splendid response of 400,000 soldiers, all volunteers, agree on the prohibition of the sale of drink, England with an equally splendid response of men and sacrifice of life and money, was still so fond of drink, so afraid of trade that all went on quite as usual and the country wasted its strength and spent its money?"

Votes for Huns.

The Vossische Zeitung recently announced that it had learned from a parliamentary source that the Prussian Government has already worked out a scheme for the reform of the franchise which it will submit to the Diet immediately upon the conclusion of peace. The authorities are maintaining silence as to the details of the scheme, the Berlin organ added, but it may be already assumed, it observed, that the system employed with regard to elections to the Reichstag will not be adopted in Prussia, but that a secret, direct ballot may be looked for, probably in conjunction with a plurality vote.

This announcement, commented the Vorwärts on the foregoing, also accords with our information. It means a challenge to both sides, to that of the defenders of the three-class suffrage, as well to that of the advocates of equal suffrage for Prussia. The decision will be made by the men who return from the front, who will have to say whether those who have fought for Empire and State are to have political rights inferior to those of other citizens. The situation will then look considerably different from what it now appears to be to the authors of the new franchise scheme.

quite impossible to see or breathe in this gas, and even when the men got out of it the lungs and heart were so affected that they were quite unable to make any exertion. One and all were agreed that to face this new danger unprotected was impossible.

"The principal method seems to have been as follows: The gas was launched from cylinders, and was carried by the easterly breeze right on to our trenches, into which, being very heavy, it rolled. Our men had to clear out of the trenches, whereupon they were met by a withering rifle fire. A couple of hundred yards back there was a swell in the ground which sheltered them from rifle fire, but a storm of shrapnel burst over their heads, for the German gunners had the range to a yard, and had everything in readiness. It was very much the method of sending a ferret down a rabbit hole, and waiting at the other opening with a gun.

"There is a wounded German officer in hospital who says that four days ago cylinders of gas arrived in the trenches, but the wind was not favorable at the time, so they were dug into position and used when the wind veered round into the east. The German troops in the first line trenches were served out with some form of mask impregnated with a chemical, which they wore over their nose and mouth. Every effort is being made at present to secure one of these, and determine the chemical present, but so far without success. M— has gone away up north this evening to try to secure one from the German prisoners, and his return is anxiously awaited. Meanwhile I have been very busy investigating the blood of some of the worst cases, examining the serum spectroscopically, in the hope that some indication may be afforded as to the nature of the gas, but up to the present the results have been disappointing."

Opened Dry Hotel.

In recognition of the overseas Dominions prohibition policy the opening ceremony of the British Empire non-alcoholic public house, Poplar, was performed by Premier Massey, of New Zealand and Colonel Richard Reid, Agent-General of Ontario lately. The speakers had something to say on the subject of empire schemes after the war. Premier Massey considered nothing more important for the welfare of the Empire than some well considered scheme evolved by Imperial and Dominion Governments. Colonel Reid corrected the fallacy that the Dominions were solely interested in agriculture. He told the audience that Canada meant to become a serious rival of Great Britain in the industrial markets of the world.

A MOROCCAN TRAGEDY

A PICTURESQUE STORY FROM AN ANCIENT LAND.

A Spanish Lady Provides Some Ex- citement for a Toy Sultan, Who Had Ordered the Special Per- formance of a Circus Although He Would Not Allow the Pro- prietress to Attend.

DAWN has not entirely blotted out the Arabian Nights. The East still has its little rom- ances, its comedies, and its tragedies. Take Morocco, for in- stance, which not so very long ago was an independent kingdom, guile- less of being nearly the cause of a European war in 1911.

When Mulai Abdul Aziz first issued from the seclusion of his palace, where, on account of his ex- treme youth, he had passed the first four or five years of his reign, it was everybody's purpose to keep him amused. The powerful grand vizier, Bu Ahmed, held absolute sway and had no intention of surrendering his position even in favor of the gentle, quiet youth who had inherited the throne. So the only statecraft they allowed their young lord and master to learn was the letting off of fire- works, the pressing of the buttons of kodak cameras, and trick bicycle rid- ing, at all three of which, under apt tutelage, his Majesty soon became an adept.

It was at this moment that a strong and good adviser might have prolonged the life of an independent Morocco, for although possessed of no great attainments or will power, Mulai Abdul Aziz was thoughtful, intelligent, and desirous of doing well. It was no easy matter, how- ever, at Marakesh, the southern cap- ital, where the court at this time was in residence, to keep the young sul- tan amused. Situated one hundred miles from the nearest port, which itself was three hundred miles down the Atlantic coast, communication with Europe was necessarily very slow, and the sultan's ever-increas- ing orders of European goods took long to carry out. Often, too, the heavy Atlantic swell rendered impos- sible communication between the ships and the shore for weeks to- gether.

The Sultan's amusers were at their last resources. Fireworks were play- ed out, bicycle tricks had led to bruises and sprains; and even photo- graphy had lost its pristine interest. At this critical moment came word of a belated circus at one of the coast towns. It must naturally have been a very poor circus ever to have found itself at that dreary little port, but its advent was welcomed as enthus- iastically as if it had been Barnum's entire show. Imperial letters were directed to the local kaid and gov- ernors, agents rushed wildly to and fro, and eventually the circus, bag and baggage, consisting of a dozen people and three or four horses, started out across the weary plains of Morocco to obey the royal command. It all took time, and meanwhile in court circles it was the absorbing topic of conversation. One or two serious rebellions among the tribes, and an acute quarrel with the gov-

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again."

—Mrs. FRED BEHNKE, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well."

—Mrs. THOS. DWYER, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."

—Miss IRENE FROELICHER, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

Robert Norwood, of London, Ontario, the brilliant Canadian preacher-poet, in his romantic drama, "The Witch of Endor," gives a new and beautiful interpretation of the old Hebrew story, which Andrew Lang, who revelled in such things, called one of the most fascinating tales for children in the literature of the world. serious rebellions among the tribes, and an acute quarrel with the government of a European power passed into temporary oblivion.

Now the proprietress of the circus was an extremely stout Spanish lady of uncertain age, on whose corpulent body the rough jogging on a mule for more than a hundred miles had left almost as painful an impression as the discomfort, heat, and worry of the journey had upon her temper. She herself took no active part in the performance, and it was on this account, to her intense indignation and wrath, that she was refused admittance to the court of the palace in which the Sultan was to witness the show. His Majesty's orders were that none but the actual performers should be allowed to enter.

So the fat lady and one or two of the employees of the circus remained in an outer courtyard adjoining the enclosure in which the Sultan, seated under a gorgeous tent, was witnessing the performance. A wall some twenty feet in height separated these two courts, and in the outer one, where the fat lady found herself, the Sultan had been building some additions to the palace, and a pile of stone, mortar, and other material reached almost to the top of the wall. The lady was both angry and bored, nor were a flock of gazelles and a few fine specimens of mouflon—Barbary wild sheep—that roamed about the enclosure sufficient to keep her amused.

To have received a royal command to come all the way to the Moorish capital, and then to be deprived of the glory of seeing her own circus performing before a real Sultan was more than she could bear, and she straightway began to climb the great heap of building material that lay piled against the wall. It was hard work, nor was her figure suited for such mountain climbing, but she was to receive assistance from a source undreamed of. Affected, no doubt, by her slow progress in a sport of which he himself was so proficient, the old ram mouflon lightly bounded after her. Balancing himself for a moment on his hind legs he lunged forward and butted the fat lady so successfully from below that her ascent was materially assisted. In a series of repeated bounds, owing to no voluntary action on her own part, she found herself pantingly grasping the top of the thick wall.

Meanwhile the performance of the circus was progressing to the Sultan's satisfaction. Suddenly, however, an expression of wrathful consternation became visible in his face, and speechless, he pointed at the wall. There, far above, was the agonized and purple visage of the fat lady, peering down at the Sultan and his court. In a moment the officers of the suite were shouting and gesticulating to her to retire. But the only reply they received was the sudden vision of a considerable portion of her immense body, as the playful mouflon, himself invisible, gave her another hoist up. At last all her body was on the wall, to which she clung for dear life with arms and legs, as she lay extended on its summit. It was at this moment that the mouflon appeared. With a majestic bound he leaped on the summit, stood for a moment poised on his hind legs, then suddenly dropped and with a terrific prod from his wide horns butted the fat lady at least a yard along the wall. He was evidently intent upon taking her round the entire circuit of the courtyard.

For a few moments there was tur-

A DIZZY JOURNEY.

Australia Has Most Zig-Zag Railway in the World.

In looking back over the history of the original settlement at Sydney, Australia, at first it seems strange that the base of the Blue Mountains, a plateau 3,000 feet in height and a day's ride from the coast, should mark the edge of known land for twenty-five years after civilization.

There are, however, good reasons for this seeming lack of enterprise, says the National Geographic Magazine. The Blue Mountains, though not lofty, are broad and constitute a formidable barrier. There are no long valleys heading in practicable passes and furnishing access from the east and west; the stream heads are boxes inclosed by walls, and it was only when the narrow divides were chosen for causeways that the passage of the mountain was successfully accomplished.

The famous "zigzags" of the first railroad, now replaced by a dozen expensive tunnels required for the steep descent of 2,000 feet give even the casual tourist an impression of the ruggedness of the plateau, and when one is led out on one of a hundred flat-topped promontories and gazes down into canyons whose walls may be scaled only by an experienced mountaineer, and looks out over a tangle of canyons and cliffs and tables at lower levels, he realizes that "magnificent scenery" for the present generation must have been "disheartening obstacles" to the scout in search of tillable land.

A Traitor Killed.

News of the death of R. A. M. Abich, a former sergeant in the Royal North-West Mounted Police, and also a former employe of the Department of Immigration in Winnipeg, has just been received at Ottawa. When killed, Abich was an officer with a body of German scouts on the west front and he therefore died while fighting against the king to whom he had sworn allegiance.

Abich came directly to Canada from Berlin in 1903 and joined the R. N. W. M. P. at Regina. Later he became sergeant at Saskatoon and in 1911 he left the force and joined the staff of the immigration office in Winnipeg. He remained until the last week in May, 1914, when he suddenly informed his friends that his grandmother in Berlin was very ill so he had to return at once to the Fatherland. He sailed for Berlin early in June, 1914, just two months before the outbreak of the war. A. M. Abich was killed by a Canadian soldier.

Following his hurried departure from Winnipeg in May, 1914, nothing further was heard of him except that it was known he was leading a body of German scouts on the west front. Then during one of the recent Canadian raids a party of troops from the Dominion, including a member of an Alberta Battalion, a soldier from Edmonton who had some trouble with Abich when the latter was with the R. N. W. M. P. at Edmonton, bombed a German dugout. Before dawn the Canadians attacked an enemy's trench and immediately upon entering the dugout this soldier recognized Abich as the officer commanding the German party and in the fight which followed Abich was killed.

literature of the world. This charming English bookman tells how on wet Sunday afternoons he as a child used to love to turn to the picture in the old family Bible which showed the white-bearded shadowy figure of Samuel rising up out of the ground, and the old witch shrinking back in astonishment and awe, and Saul falling forward to the earth.

Mr. Norwood's Witch of Endor is a beautiful creation, in no way suggested by the conventional picture of Andrew Lang's childhood, and in no way related to the wild and weird sisters, with choppy fingers and skinny lips, of "Macbeth," or to the withered beldams, old and droll, of "Tam o' Shanter." In grace of form, and beauty of spirit, and charm of personality, she recalls Shelley's witch of a witch, who lived in a cave on Atlas Mountains, whose soft smile shone afar, whose low voice was heard like love, and drew all things to her.

According to this latest interpretation of the familiar Bible story, Saul fell in love with the Witch of Endor when he met her in early life, and who can wonder at it? If the Salem witches had possessed the irresistible charms of the beautiful heroine of Mr. Norwood's exquisite drama, it would have been difficult even for the unemotional and unsusceptible Puritans of New England to find an executioner. This interesting drama, with its touches of romance, and tragic heart-breaks, and supreme sacrifices of love, leaves a haunting memory in the soul.

A Picturesque Ceremony.

The colors of the 124th Battalion, the Toronto unit known as the "Pals," have been deposited in Witley Parish Church for safekeeping until they can be reclaimed after the war. This church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is one of the oldest in England and is so ancient that it is mentioned in Domesday Book about 1081. Architecturally and historically it appeals to Canadians as a fitting sanctuary for the safekeeping of battalion emblems, and a short time ago the 123rd Battalion, another Toronto unit, deposited its colors in the same place. The Pals Battalion, which was recruited by the Mississauga Horse and the Governor-General's Body Guard, completed its training at Bramshott and Witley Camps, going to the front from the latter. Papers recently received from England give an account of the ceremony of depositing the colors in the historic building. Under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Vaux Chadwick, the battalion marched from the camp to the church with fixed bayonets. It was an impressive sight when the four companies lined the streets in double ranks, each platoon presenting arms as the King's and regimental colors passed through, carried by Lieut. J. A. Bell and Lieut. L. B. Duckworth, while the band played "Auld Lang Syne" in slow time. The men then filed into the church to the tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers." A short service followed, and the vicar placed the colors on the altar with the following words: "We, the vicar and the churchwardens of this ancient Church of All Saints, Witley, do herewith receive the colors of the 124th Battalion, Canadian Infantry, and God helping us, will keep them in all security until such time as they are claimed by the battalion. In token thereof we lay them upon our altar in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."

The Ford is as easy to operate as a kitchen range, no knowledge of mechanical details being necessary. Inexpensive to operate. A woman can call around town all afternoon or take a 25-mile spin in the country, at the minimum of cost for gasoline, oil, wear on tires, etc.

WONDERFUL STUFF!
LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS
Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.
This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.
Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.
Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.
This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.
Just think! No pain at all; no sore-ness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

INTERNATIONAL PEACE.
Plans to Secure It Have Been Tried For Three Centuries.
Admirable and farsighted plans for securing a peaceful international order have been before the world for 300 years. M. Emeric Cruce submitted his plan, which included liberty of commerce throughout all the world, as early as 1623. Following the peace of Utrecht, the Abbe de St. Pierre developed his plan, which included mediation, arbitration and an interesting addition to the effect that any sovereign who took up arms before the union of nations had declared war or who refused to execute a regulation of the union or a judgment of the senate was to be declared an enemy of European society. The union was then to make war upon him until he should be dis-

CLOTHES NEEDED FOR BELGIANS
For the information of those interested we will quote below from from an item bearing on this subject which appeared in a recent issue of a Toronto daily paper, the information given having been sent to the Belgian Relief Committee, of Toronto.
"Through the courtesy of the C. P.
R. officials arrangements have been made to renew the shipping of a limited amount of clothing for the Belgian refugees and children under the supervision of Mrs. Adamson. The latter, writing from that part of un-conquered Belgium, where she is working, gives a sad account of the condition of the school boys between 8 and 15 years of age, who are literally in rags. Other urgent needs are shawls, chemises, and hosiery for elderly women, and boots for adults and children of all ages. All articles of clothing should be of strong, coarse material, and no worn clothing can be accepted, unless exceptionally good, and absolutely clean. Mrs.
Adamson also writes of the great advance in food prices, and in consequence the need of more money in order to add to the scanty rations."
We desire to thank again very sincerely Mrs. C. Gould who has knitted us so many pairs of beautiful socks, which she continues to send in to our work-room at regular intervals.
Last week a fine case of hospital supplies was sent to Lady Drummond, among which were twelve beautifully made comforts bags fully fitted, for which there is such a demand, night shirts, pillows and cases, socks and other useful articles.

We would remind our workers and members that though the season for spring cleaning and renovation is here, the Spring Drive is also on, on the western front in France and Belgium, which means that increased hospital requirements are called for,
and the needs of our men in the trenches are greater. Therefore, let us all do our part to meet these demands!
Our work-room is open every Thursday and Saturday afternoon, so come and do your share to help.

society. The union was then to make war upon him until he should be disarmed or until the regulation or judgment should be executed.

Some twenty years earlier William Penn had produced his quaint and really extraordinary plan for the peace of Europe, in which he, too, proposed to proceed by military power against any sovereign who refused to submit his claims to a proposed diet, or parliament, of Europe or who refused to abide by and to perform any judgment of such a body.

All these plans, like those of Rousseau, Bentham and Kant, which came later, as well as William Ladd's elaborate and carefully considered essay on a congress of nations, published in 1840, were brought into the world too soon. They were the fine and noble dreams of seers which it is taking civilized men three centuries and more to begin effectively to realize.

Force of Light.

Light has an actual mechanical pressure and can be measured in the laboratory. It has been found that the sun's light in itself presses against the earth with a force something like 70,000 tons. As the surface of a sphere varies as the square of the radius, and as the volume or mass varies as the cube of the radius, and as the mechanical pressure of light on the whole surface varies as that surface, and as the force of gravity varies as the mass, if a sphere is made smaller and smaller it is easily seen that the pressure of light does not decrease so fast as the force of gravity, so bodies beyond a certain minuteness could not reach the sun, but would be repelled by the mechanical force of its light.

OUR OTTAWA LETTER

The rumour is about that the Hearst Government will go to the country very soon. People who have been keeping tab on the Hearst Government, say that if ever a Government merited defeat, it is the present outfit in Queen's Park, Toronto. There are only two things the Hearst Government does well—taxing the people and spending their money.

A prime sample of their taxing ability is the war tax of one mill on the dollar, which was imposed on every ratepayer in the Province of Ontario. It's all cream for the Hearst Government, because the tax is collected through the municipalities and doesn't cost the Queen's Park crowd a cent. The only reason they could possibly give for the tax, was that they taxed while the taxing was good. It was an act of sheer wantonness, and what the Hearst Government was wanting was the money.

The tax netted in 1915, two million, dollars—in 1916, another two million, and this year, another two million. Six millions easy money filched from the people in three years. Filched, moreover, on the falsest pretenses—that it was to be spent on the war. As a matter of fact, perhaps two millions have been spent on hospitals, machine guns and such, and the other four millions have been, or will be diverted to other purposes wiping out, deficits and stopping leaks in various branches of the public service. There is reason to believe that Provincial Treasurer McGarry's alleged surplus is derived from this source. If he has a surplus, he ought to be ashamed of it. He has squeezed it out of an over-taxed people.

A Conservative Government has been in power in Ontario for twelve years now. It is, therefore, rotten ripe for a change. It saw its best days under Sir James Whitney, with whose sympathy and encouragement, Sir Adam Beck was able to put through his great public ownership enterprise, the Hydro Electric. But Sir James Whitney died and took his honesty and courage with him, and, after that, Sir Adam had to fight a lone hand. His colleagues did not love the people as Sir Adam did, and never failed to put a crimp in the Hydro Electric when the chance offered. What's more, they told their Tory friends in Ottawa to do likewise, so that whenever Sir Adam put in an appearance there, he found the Borden Government as frosty as a step-mother's breath.

The hostility of the Railway Committee, the law's delays, postponed or juggled appropriations, have all been worked by the Hearst Government tax. Its profits are sixteen million dollars a year. Only the other day questions in the Legislature disclosed the fact that during the last three years, some thirteen hundred acres of valuable nickel lands passed to the Nickel Trust at $3 an acre or less. The Nickel Trust's natural resources are enormously increased by this clandestine transaction.

The Nickel Trust never seems to get enough. It is in strong with two governments—the Hearst Government and the Borden Government. The Hon. Frank Cochrane is the Nickel Trust's active friend in Ottawa, just as he was in Queen's Park, Toronto. When the Hon. Frank, like Enoch, was translated higher up, he left a nickel-plated Premier behind him, in the shape of Wm. Hearst, now Sir Wm., a little country lawyer, who daren't call his soul his own. It's Frank Cochrane who will explain the new tax to the Nickel Trust. He is the strong arm man. Hearst is only his putty substitute.

Confident that its friends in Ottawa and Toronto would stay put, the Nickel Trust did not even have the decency to stop sending nickel to the Germans while the war was on. The Deutschland was the last enemy boat to take a cargo over. The Borden Government and the Hearst Government may be satisfied with the window dressing the Nickel Trust did when the Borden Government's agent made a gentlemanly inspection of the books, but the people of Ontario are not. Too much of our good Sudbury nickel is coming back to us in our soldier boys' bodies to let the Nickel Trust get away with it much longer.

The Government which took six extra millions in taxes out of the unfortunate people, and denied itself twelve millions from the Nickel Trust, was meanwhile spending a million dollars on a Government House, which had to have thousand dollar rugs, and furniture on a similar scale to keep it in countenance. The Hearst Government takes a lot of money from the people, but it certainly spends it free. A drunken sailor could not do it freer.

True to form, the Hearst Government refused to support J. C. Elliott's motion to investigate the combines in Ontario, which are so shamelessly exploiting food prices. If the Hearst Government went looking for food combines, it would find them and that is the last thing the Hearst Government wants to do. It doesn't want to discover its pork-packing and cold-storage friends, who are boosting the price of every necessary of life, any more than the Borden Government does. In this matter the two governments work together. The Borden Government cannot hurt the food kings, who put it in office in 1911, so it staves things off by appointing Commissions, whose duty it is to report as tardily as possible. When this ruse wears thin, the Borden Government suggests a method whereby, if a private citizen will start proceedings, the municipal council may get permission from the Provincial Government to take the thing up and report results to the Ottawa Government, which may take action if deemed advisable. Of course the investigation gets lost in the wilderness. That is the Borden Government's way of handling the high cost of living—diplomacy. The Hearst Government refuses outright.

juggled appropriations, have all been worked by the Hearst Government to keep Sir Adam down, and the monopolist corporations up. And now that Mr. Hanna has practically retired to the greater affluence of the Standard Oil Co., and has taken his brains with him, the Hearst Government's work has become very coarse indeed. It shows no delicacy whatever.

While the Hearst Government was stabbing public ownership in the back and squeezing a superfluous six million dollars in taxes out of a long suffering people, it was letting the Nickel Trust off with a paltry $40,000 a year. The Hearst Government has been doing that for four years, and the Whitney Government was doing it for eight years before that. The other day, largely through the brilliant efforts of N. W. Rowell and Hartley Dewart, a tax of five per cent on mine output up to $5,000,000 and of one per cent for each additional five millions, was imposed by the Hearst Government. This is the regular course of events—it was so with prohibition and women suffrage, and it is equally so with nickel—Leader Rowell proposes, Premier Hearst disposes, and, if it is a case of taxes on a wealthy corporation, imposes, when it is no longer possible to get out of it.

Under the new tax, the Nickel Trust will pay the Hearst Government one million dollars a year, instead of the $40,000 it has been getting off with. As the tax is retroactive to 1915, the Nickel Trust will hand over three million dollars to the Hearst Government during the current year. In a word, Ontario's losses are compounded at that sum. If the Nickel Trust paid at the same rate for the twelve years that the Conservative Government has been winking the other eye, it would enrich the Provincial Treasury by twelve million dollars instead of three million dollars. The Nickel Trust parts with three million dollars and saves nine million. One doesn't know just how many ways that nine millions is split but a good part of it, no doubt, gets back to the Nickel Trust.

One way and another, the Nickel Trust ought to be able to pay the

It was only when people began to bake their own bread, that bread came down. It was only when people denied themselves potatoes, that potatoes took a tumble. The Borden Government, although it was given extraordinary powers under the War Measures' Act, has never lifted a finger to check food prices, which are higher in this land of peace and plenty than they are in war stricken Europe. We are even afraid to mention rice as an article of diet, for fear the food forestalling friends of the Borden Government and the Hearst Government will beat us to it. So far as the Borden Government is concerned, its policy from the start of the war has been "All our friends must get rich out of this. After that we're willing to quit."

As the war may, last another year, the Borden Government will ask for another year's extension. It does not wish to leave office so long as its friends can shake the people down for another dollar. This means that the Borden Government doesn't want to go out until the profiteers have sucked the orange. When the war is over, the Borden Government will be glad to leave the empty grind to the Liberals to see if they can put the substance back again.

Can Replace Picture.

Senator Boyer recently gave out a piece of news that will be very welcome to Canadians, who prize our national relics. One of the serious losses sustained by Canada in the burning of the Parliament House was the destruction of the picture of the Confederation conference which hung in the Railway Committee Room. The canvas showed all the figures who had finally brought to consummation the federation pact; each of the persons was represented by a true portrait. The canvas was destroyed and could never be restored, but the National Advisory Art Council has secured from Mr. Harris, the artist who painted the picture, the original drawings from which he painted the group. In the drawings, as in the picture, each of the fathers of Confederation is represented by a true portrait. The artist is too far advanced in years to paint another group, and it has not been thought advisable to have the work done from the drawings by another hand; but it is a consolation to know that the original drawings are now the property of Canada.

The Color Cure.

To cure smallpox was apparently a very simple matter in the good old times. John of Gaddeston, court doctor to Edward II., has recorded that he got rid of the disease by the simple expedient of wrapping his patients in red cloth. "Let scarlet red be taken," he says, "and let him who is suffering from smallpox be entirely wrapped in it or in some other red cloth. I did thus when the son of the illustrious king of England suffered from smallpox. I took care that all about his bed should be red, and that cure succeeded very well."—London Tatler.

PLANTING OF SEED has been determined that suitable for digging and is nice and warm, it is the seeds be planted in. As fine a surface as possible be secured, so that the will quickly germinate and sow the seeds quickly, thinly requires consideration and care. The row must be straight by stretching a piece of string from one end of the garden to another as a guide for making the drills for placing the seeds. The seeds have been dropped should at once be covered by gently drawing some surface soil in over the piece of stick or with the soil should, however, not be over the row but should evenly with the rest of soil and packed down.

A POSER FOR THE JUDGE.

The Way the Accused Put the Case Up to the Court.

Writing of Polish temperament and talent, Sidney Whittman in "Things I Remember" has an amusing story of a bright Polish Jew who traded in chemicals. He was brought before the law courts for selling poison without fulfilling the legal enactments bearing on such transactions.

The magistrate proceeded to read out the charge when the Jew suddenly interrupted him with the question: "Excuse me, Mr. President. Do you understand anything about chemicals?"

"Mr. S., the expert, is here in that capacity," replied the judge.

"And you, Mr. S.," queried the Jew, "do you understand anything about law?"

"You have just heard from his worship that I am an expert in chemicals. If you want to know anything about law please address yourself to the judge."

"I ask you, Mr. President, just to consider the case for one moment. You are the judge of the court and admit that you do not understand anything about chemicals, and the expert tells us that he does not know anything about law. And I, a poor Jew, am expected to be familiar both with the law and with chemicals. Now, Mr. President, I ask you how you can possibly convict me?"

TRAPPED IN A STROKEHOLE.

The Fate That Firemen on a Warship Are Liable to Meet.

The soldiers who fight with least recognition in the battles at sea are the stokers of the destroyers running at full speed. Eight men work under the command of a stoker petty officer in a space so narrow that movement of any kind seems impossible. There is a furnace in front and one in the back. Sandwiched in between is a maze of levers, pipes, pumps and gear.

Yet within these close quarters the stokers find space to perform their heartbreaking toil in an atmosphere almost too hot to breathe, says the Popular Science Monthly. When the men are at their posts the iron hatch is closed down, and the air sucked in through a ventilator has to pass through the furnace before it gets to them.

So long as the pumps work well and the evaporated water is displaced with automatic regularity by fresh neither the tubes nor the boiler casting can get dangerously hot. But sometimes without apparent cause the water slowly descends below the level. Sometimes the cause of mischief is a leakage—a pipe broken or a joint strained that allows the water to escape.

If it can be remedied, well and good. But if not and the water continues to drop steadily the stoker petty officer has but one duty to perform—to keep the hatchway from being opened by the frenzied stokers, thus allowing the flames to escape and destroy the entire vessel. The heroes who perish in the stokeholds like so many rats caught in a fiery trap are not even listed.

TING OF SEEDS. When it is determined that the soil is for digging and the weather and warm, it is necessary that seeds be planted in the garden. A surface as possible should be made, so that the little seeds quickly germinate and grow. To seeds quickly, evenly, and requires considerable practice. The row may be made by stretching fairly tight a string from one portion of the garden to another and using this for making the trenches or for placing the seeds in. After seeds have been dropped in they at once be covered with soil by drawing some of the loose soil in over the seeds with a stick or with the hands. This method, however, not be heaped the row but should be placed with the rest of the garden packed down.

SPACING. Backyard gardeners do not attempt to grow immense crops at first. It is necessary to plant sufficient seed to secure a crop of plants, the more slender being thinned out soon after above ground so as to assure ample room for a good crop of plants. The thinning should be commenced when the plants are from one to two inches high and should not be left until the plants have become long and because if they are left one may try to smother another. Whereas, if they are thinned at proper distance they will grow to their required maturity.

SPACING. The city dweller will find it almost impossible to grow first-class quality vegetables as tomatoes, cabbages unless he has facilities such as a hot-bed, which enables him to start the seeds early in the spring and some of the crops could have been out in the garden, in order to secure early crops. It is a mistake for him to purchase plants which may be taken to the garden and transplanted into the garden at a required time and good healthy crops from them, and in all cases purchasing plants only sturdy vigorous growing plants should be selected. Tomato plants to give results should be eight inches high, and the stalk should be as thick as a lead pencil and if possible. If the plants are in bloom this may be considered a very good feature. The stems of the plants should be thick and having fine rootlets. When planting individual plants care should be taken to make sure that a good deal of soil is left to the root of each plant.

THE ODOR OF SPICES.

Often Used by Writers to Stimulate Their Imagination.

On some portions of the globe spices are worth more than gold or silver.

"In the arctic region spices are essential to health and happiness," writes an explorer. "A dash of pepper, a pinch of ground cinnamon, a little nutmeg or a pinch of ginger root revives the jaded appetite wonderfully in the north. I have seen shipwrecked sailors fight over an ounce of spices with more fierceness than they ever did for money."

The psychological effect of spices is of more importance than the physiological. Many writers have confessed their inability to write without the odor of spices in their rooms. One great musician composed his masterpiece under the influence of cinnamon and cloves steaming in a kettle of preserves in a neighbor's kitchen. Thereafter he composed only when steamed cloves and cinnamon were on hand.

The food of one man, however, very often happens to be more or less violent poison for another. In the annals of insane asylums there are many cases on record where the odor of cloves, cinnamon, pepper, allspice or ginger has driven patients into violent paroxysms.

Yet all the world loves spices. In the fear that the source of supply would eventually become exhausted chemists have sought to make spices synthetically. They have succeeded in a number of instances to such an extent that cheap adulterations are sometimes used.—Exchange.

they want to have you where they can keep their eyes on you. Sorry, you know."

"Close in! March!" commanded the sergeant. The guard surrounded the hapless barber and wheeled through the door, their guns hedging his white jacket about inexorably. Sherman's hands spread his contrails wide apart, and he rocked back forth on heels and toes, his eyes smoldering.

"Come on, father"—Kitty had slipped her hand through her dad's arm and was imparting direct strategy in a low voice—"we'll take mother down the street to look at the shops and make her forget our troubles. They've got some wonderful Moroccan bazaars in town. Baedeker says so."

"Shops, did you say?" Mrs. Sherman perked up at once, forgetting her grief under the superior lure.

"Yes, mother. Come on, let's go down and look 'em over." Sherman's good humor was quite restored. He pinched Kitty's arm in compliment for her guile. "Maybe that'll let us look my name's Capper—Mr. William Capper. Never heard the name—in Alexandria—what?"

"You are drunk. Stand aside!" Woodhouse spoke quietly. His face was very white and strained. Almer launched himself suddenly between the two and laid his hands roughly on Capper's thin shoulders.

"Out you go!" he choked in a thick guttural. "I'll have no loafer insulting guests in my house."

"Oh, you won't, won't you? But supposing I want to take a room here—pay you good English gold for it. You'll sing a different tune, then."

"Before I throw you out, kindly leave my place." By a quick turn Almer had Capper facing the door; his grip was iron. The smaller man tried to walk to the door with dignity. There he paused and looked back over his shoulder.

"Remember, Captain Woodhouse," he called back, "remember the name against the time we'll meet again. Capper—Mr. William Capper."

Capper disappeared. Almer came back to begin profuse apologies to his guest. Woodhouse was coolly lighting a cigarette. Their eyes met.

CHAPTER VIII.

Chaff of War.

DINNER that evening in the faded dining room of the Hotel Splendide was in the way of being a doleful affair for the folk from Kewanee, aside from Captain Woodhouse, the only persons at table there. Woodhouse, true to the continental tradition of exclusiveness, had isolated himself against possible approach by sitting at the table farthest from the Shermans. His back presented an uncompromising denial of fraternity. As for Mrs. Sherman, the afternoon's visit to the bazaars had been anything but a solace, emphasizing, as it did, their grievous poverty in the midst of a plenty contemptuous of a mere letter of credit. Henry J. was wallowing in the lowest depths of nostalgia. He tortured himself with the reflection that this was lodge night in Kewanee and he would not be sitting in his chair. Miss Kitty contemplated with melancholy the distress of her parents.

A tall, slender youth with tired eyes and affecting the blasé slouch of the the Enterprise next week."

The expatriate shivered and tried to smile.

"We'll let mother do the lecturing," Kitty came to his rescue. "How to Live in Europe on a Letter of Discredit—that will have all the gossips of Kewanee buzzing, mother."

The meal drew to a close happily in contrast to its beginning. Mrs. Sherman and her daughter rose to pass out into the reception room. Sherman and Kimball lingered.

"Ah-h, Willy!"

"Mr. Sherman!"

Both began in unison, each somewhat furtive and shamefaced.

"Have you any money?" The queries were voiced as one. For an instant confusion; then the older man looked up into the younger's face—a bit flushed it was—and guffawed.

"Not a postage stamp, Willy! I guess we're both beggars, and if mother and Kitty didn't have five trunks between them this Swiss holdup man who says he's proprietor of this way station hotel wouldn't trust us for a fried egg."

"Same here," admitted Kimball. "I'm badly bent."

"They can't keep us down—us Americans!" Sherman cheered, taking the youth's arm and piloting him out into the reception room. "We'll find a way out if we have to cable for a warship to come and get us."

Just as Sherman and Kimball emerged from the dining room there was a diversion out beyond the glass doors on Waterport street. A small cart drew up. From its seat jumped a young woman in a duster and with a heavy automobile veil swathed under her chin. To the Arab porter who had bounded out to the street she gave directions for the removal from the cart of her baggage, two heavy suit cases and two ponderous osier baskets. These latter she was particularly tender of, following them into the hotel's reception room and directing where they should be put before the desk.

The newcomer was Jane Gerson, Hildebrand's buyer, at the end of a motor flight from Paris. In the French capital she had managed after considerable difficulty to have an interview with the American ambassador and his wife. The latter was completely won by Jane's story of her anxiety to get herself and her gowns quickly back to New York. It was the ambassador's wife who suggested her going to Gibraltar and who arranged the necessary details of the trip for her. Cool, capable, self-reliant as on the night she saw the bastions of the capital's outer forts fade under the white spikes of the searchlights, Jane strode up to the desk to face the smiling Almer.

"Is this a fortress or a hotel?" she challenged.

"A hotel, lady, a hotel," Almer purred. "A nice room—yes. Will the lady be with us long?"

"Heaven forbid! The lady is going to be on the first ship leaving for New York. And if there are no ships I'll look over the stock of coal barges you have in your harbor." She seized a pen and dashed her signature on the register. The Shermans had pricked up their ears at the newcomer's first words. Now Henry J. pressed forward, his face glowing welcome.

"An American, a simon pure citizen good humor was quite restored. He pinched Kitty's arm in compliment for her guile. "Maybe they'll let us look at their stuff without charging anything. But we couldn't buy a postage stamp, remember." They sailed out into the crowded street and lost themselves amid the scourgings of Africa and south Europe. Almer was alone in the office.

The proprietor fidgeted. He walked to the door and looked down the street in the direction of the quays. He pulled his watch from his pocket and compared it with the blue face of the Dutch clock on the wall. His pudgy hands clasped and unclasped themselves behind his back nervously. An Arab hotel porter and runner at the docks came swinging through the front door with a small steamer trunk on his shoulders, and Almer started forward expectantly. Behind the porter came a tall well-knit man dressed in quiet traveling suit—the Captain Woodhouse who had sailed from Alexandria as a passenger aboard the Princess Mary.

He paused for an instant as his eyes met those of the proprietor. Almer bowed and hastened behind the desk. Woodhouse stepped up to the register and scanned it casually.

"A room, sir?" Almer held out a pen invitingly.

"For the night, yes," Woodhouse answered shortly, and he signed the register. Almer's eyes followed the strokes of the pen eagerly.

"Ah, from Egypt, captain? You were aboard the Princess Mary, then?"

"From Alexandria, yes. Show me my room, please. Hastily tired."

The Arab porter darted forward, and Woodhouse was turning to follow him when he nearly collided with a man just entering the street door. It was Mr. Billy Capper.

"Out you go!"

Both recoiled as their eyes met. Just the faintest flicker of surprise, instantly suppressed, tightened the muscles of the captain's jaws. He murmured a "Beg pardon" and started to pass. Capper deliberately set himself in the other's path and, with a wry smile, held out his hand.

"Captain Woodhouse, I believe," Capper put a tang of sarcasm, corroding as acid, into the words. He was still smiling. The other man drew back and eyed him coldly.

"I do not know you. Some mistake," Woodhouse said.

Almer was moving around from behind the desk with the soft tread of a cat, his eyes fixed on the hard bitten face of Capper.

"Hah! Don't recognize the second cabin passengers aboard the Princess Mary, eh?" Capper sneered. "Little bit discriminating that way, eh? Well, her parents.

A tall, slender youth with tired eyes and affecting the blasé slouch of the boulevards appeared in the door and cast about for a choice of tables. Him Mr. Sherman impaled with a glance of disapproval which suddenly changed to wondering recognition. He dropped his fork and jumped to his feet.

"Bless me, mother, if it isn't Willy Kimball from old Kewanee!" Sherman waved his napkin at the young man, summoning him in the name of Kewanee to come and meet the home folks. The tired eyes lighted perceptibly and a lukewarm smile played about Mr. Kimball's effeminate mouth as he stepped up to the table.

"Why, Mrs. Sherman—and Kitty! And you, Mr. Sherman—charmed!" He accepted the proffered seat by the side of Kitty, receiving their hearty hails with languid politeness. With the sureness of English restraint Mr. Willy Kimball refused to become excited. He was of the type of exotic Americans who try to forget grandpa's corn fed hogs and grandma's hand churned butter. His speech was of Rotten row and his clothes Piccadilly.

"Terrible business this!" The youth fluttered his hands feebly. "All this harrying about and peeping at passports by every silly officer one meets. I'm afraid I'll have to go over to America until it's all over—on my way now, in fact."

"Afraid!" Sherman sniffed loudly and appraised Mr. Kimball's tailoring with a disapproving eye. "Well, Willy, it would be too bad if you had to go back to Kewanee after your many years in Paris. Now, wouldn't it?"

Kimball turned to the women for sympathy. "Reserved a compartment to come down from Paris. Beastly treatment. Held up at every city; other people crowded in my apartment, though I'd paid to have it alone, of course; soldier chap comes along and seizes my valet and makes him join the colors and all that sort"—

"Huh! Your father managed to worry along without a val-lay, and he was respected in Kewanee." This in disgust from Henry J.

Kitty flashed a reproving glance at her father and deftly turned the expatriate into a recounting of his adventures. Under her unaffected lead the youth, who shuddered inwardly at the appellation of "Willy," thawed considerably, and soon there was an animated swapping of reminiscences of the great terror—hours on end before the banks and express offices, dodging of police impositions, scrambling for steamer accommodations—all that went to compose the refugee Americans' great epic of August, 1914.

Sherman took pride in his superior adventures: "Five times arrested between Berlin and Gibraltar, and what I said to that Dutchman on the Swiss frontier was enough to make his hair curl.

"Tell you what, Willy; you come on back to Kewanee with us and mother and you'll lecture before the Thursday Afternoon Ladies' Literary club," Sherman boomed, with a hearty blow of the hand between Willy's shoulder blades. "I'll have Ed Porter announce it in advance in the Daily Enterprise, and we'll have the whole town there to listen. 'Ezra Kimball's Boy Tells Thrilling Tale of War's Alarms'—that's the way the headlines'll read in words. Now Henry J. pressed forward, his face glowing welcome.

"An American, a simon pure citizen of the United States! I thought so Welcome to the little old Rock!" He took both the girl's hands impulsively and pumped them. Mrs. Sherman, Kitty and Willy Kimball crowded around, and the clatter of voices was instantaneous: "By auto from Paris Goodness me!" "Not a thing to eat for three days but rye bread!" "From Strassburg to Luneville in a farmer's wagon!" Each in a whirlwind of ejaculation tried to outdo the other's story of hardship and privation.

The front doors opened again, and the sergeant and guard who had earlier carried off Fritz, the barber, entered. Again gun butts thumped ominously. Jane looked over her shoulder at the khaki coated men and confided to the Shermans:

"I think that man's been following me ever since I landed from the ferry."

"I have," answered the sergeant, stepping briskly forward and saluting. "You are a stranger on the Rock. You come here from"—

"From Paris by motor to the town across the bay, then over here on the ferry," the girl answered promptly.

"What about it?"

"Your name?"

"Jane Gerson. Yes, yes, it sounds German, I know. But that's not my fault. I'm an American—a redhot American, too, for the last two weeks."

The sergeant's face was wooden.

"Where are you going?"

"To New York on the Saxonia just as soon as I can. And the British army can't stop me."

"Indeed!" The sergeant permitted himself a fleeting smile. "From Paris by motor, eh? Your passports, please."

"I haven't any," Jane retorted, with a shade of defiance. "They were taken from me in Spain, just over the French border, and were not returned."

The sergeant raised his eyebrows in surprise not unminged with irony. He pointed to the two big osier baskets, demanding to know what they contained.

"Gowns—the last gowns made in Paris before the crash, fashion's last gasp. I am a buyer of gowns for Hildebrand's store in New York."

Ecstatic gurgles of pleasure from Mrs. Sherman and her daughter greeted this announcement. They pressed about the baskets and regarded them lovingly.

The sergeant pushed them away and tried to throw back the covers.

"Open your baggage—all of it!" he commanded snappishly.

Jane, explaining over her shoulder to the women, stooped to fumble with the hasps.

"Seventy of the darlinest gowns, the very last Paul Pierre and Racket and Gerth made before they closed shop and marched away with their regiments. You shall see every one of them."

"Hurry, please! My time's limited!" the sergeant barked.

"I should think it would be, you're so charming," Jane flung back over her shoulder, and she raised the tops of the baskets. The other women pushed forward with subdued coos.

The sergeant plunged his hand under a mass of colored stuffiness, groped for a minute and brought forth a long roll of heavy paper. With a fierce effect.

"Isn't it too bad this sold isn't married, so he could these beauties?" She flicked,chievous eye his way. "Of-can't be married or he'd rec-plan of a gown. Clean ha-Mr. Sergeant, if you're goin-any of these dreams! He! Now look at that mousquet-the effect of the war—mi-know."

The sergeant was thorough by this time, and he forced tion suddenly near tragedy, fingers a delicate girdle cr-piciously.

"Here—your knife! Rip There are papers of some s here." He started to pass to one of his soldiers. Jane c a scream.

CHAPTER IX.

An Unexpected Meeting.

A PURSY little man with an air of supreme importance—Henry Reynolds he was, United States consul at Gibraltar—catapulted in from the street while the gown chatter was at its noisiest.
He threw his hands above his head in a mock attitude of submissiveness before a highwayman.

"'S all fixed, ladies and gentlemen,"
he cried with a showman's eloquence.
"Here's Lady Crandall come to tell you about it, and she's so busy riding her hobby—gowns and millinery and such—she has forgotten. I'll bet dollars to doughnuts."

"Credit to whom credit is due, Mr.
Consul," she rallied. "I'm not stealing anybody's official thunder." The consul wagged a forefinger at her reprovingly.
With impatience the refugees waited to hear the news.

"Well, it's this way," Reynolds began. "I've got so tired having all you people sitting on my doorstep I just had to make arrangements to ship you on the Saxonia in self defense. Saxo-nia's due here from Naples Thursday, day after tomorrow; sails for New York at dawn Friday morning. Lady Crandall here—and a better American never came out of the middle west—has agreed to go bond for your passage money. All your letters of credit and checks will be cashed by treasury agents before you leave the dock at New York, and you can settle with the steamship people right there.

"No, no; don't thank me. There's the person responsible for your getting home." The consul waved toward the governor's lady, who blushed rosily under the tumultuous blessings showered on her. Reynolds ducked out the door to save his face. The Shermans made their good nights and, with Kimball, started toward the stairs.

"Thursday night, before you sail," Lady Crandall called to them, "you all have an engagement, a regular American dinner with me at the government house. Remember!"

"If you have hash—plain hash—and don't call it a rag-owt we'll eat you out of house and home," Sherman shouted as addendum to the others' thanks.

"And you, my dear"—Lady Crandall beamed upon Jane—"you're coming right home with me to wait for the Saxonia's sailing. Oh, no; don't be too ready with your thanks. This is pure selfishness on my part. I want you to help plan my fall clothes. There, the secret's out. But with all those beauti-

"Why, Captain Woodhouse, how jol-

She put out her hand with a free gesture of comradeship.

Captain Woodhouse did not see the girl's hand. He was looking into her eyes coldly, aloofly.

"I beg your pardon, but aren't you mistaken?"

"Mistaken?" The girl was staring at him, mystified.

"I'm afraid I have not had the pleasure of meeting you," he continued evenly. "But if I can be of service—now!"

She shrugged her shoulders and turned away from him.

"A small matter. I owe this man 20 shillings, and he will not accept French paper. It's all I have."

Woodhouse took the note from her.
"I'll take it gladly—perfectly good."
He took some money from his pocket and looked at it. Then to Almer, "I say, can you split a crown?"

"Change for you in a minute, sir—

mer pocketed the gold piece and dodg-

Jane turned and found the deep set grey eyes of Captain Woodhouse fixed

"All of the new officers have to report to the governor's wife as well," Lady Crandall rallied, with a glance at Jane. "You must come and see me—and Miss Gerson, who will be with me until her boat sails."

Woodhouse caught his breath. Jane Gerson, who knew him, at the governor's home! But he mastered himself in a second and bowed his thanks.
Lady Crandall was moving toward the door. Her ward turned and held out a hand to Woodhouse.

"So good of you to have straightened out my finances," she said, with a smile in which the man hoped he read full forgiveness for his denial of a few minutes before. "If you're ever in America I hope"—He looked up quickly. "I hope somebody will be as nice to you. Good night."

Jane's thanks were ignored by the capable packer who smoothed and straightened the confections of silk and satin in the osier hampers. Lady Crandall summoned the porter to lift the precious freight to the back of her dogcart, waiting outside. Almer, perturbed at the kidnaping of his guest, came from behind the desk.

"You will go to your room now?" he queried anxiously.

"Not going to take it," Jane answered. "Have an invitation from Lady Crandall to visit the statehouse, or whatever you call it."

"But, pardon me, the room—it was rented, and I fear one night's lodging is due. Twenty shillings."

Jane elevated her eyebrows, but handed over a bill.

"Ah, no, lady; French paper—it is worthless to me. Only English gold, if the lady pleases." Almer's smile was leonine.

"But it's all I've got. Just came from France, and"—

"Then, though it gives me the great- est sorrow, I must hold your luggage until you have the money changed. Excuse"—

Captain Woodhouse, who had dallied long over his dinner for lack of some- thing else to do, came out of the din- ing room just then, saw a woman in difficulties with the landlord and in- stinctively stepped forward to offer his services.

"Beg pardon, but can I be of any help?"

Jane turned. The captain's heart gave a great leap and then went cold. Frank pleasure followed the first sur- prise in the girl's eyes.

Jane turned and found the deep set gray eyes of Captain Woodhouse fixed upon her. They craved pardon—toler- ation of the incident just passed.

Woodhouse hurried to Jane Gerson's side and began to speak swiftly and earnestly:

"You are from the States?"

A shrug was her answer. The girl's face was averted, and in the defiant set of her shoulders Woodhouse found little promise of pardon for the in- cident of the minute before. He per- sisted:

"This war means nothing to you— one side or the other?"

"I have equal pity for them both," she answered in a low voice.

"We are living in dangerous times," he continued earnestly. "I tell you frankly were the fact that you and I had met before to become known here on the Rock the consequences would be most—inconvenient—for me." Jane turned and looked searchingly into his face. Something in the tone rather than the words roused her quick sym- pathy. Woodhouse kept on:

"I am sorry I had to deny that form- er meeting just now—that meeting which has been with me in such vivid memory. I regret that were you to al- lude to it again I would have to deny it still more emphatically."

"I'm sure I shan't mention it again," the girl broke in shortly.

"Perhaps since it means so little to you—your silence—perhaps you will do me that favor, Miss Gerson."

"Certainly." Woodhouse could see that anger still tinged her speech.

"May I go further and ask you to— promise?" A shadow of annoyance creased her brow, but she nodded.

"That is very good of you," he thank- ed her. "Shall you be long on the Rock?"

"No longer than I have to. I'm sail- ing on the first boat for the States," she answered.

"Then I am in luck—tonight." Wood- house tried to speak easily, though Jane Gerson's attitude was distant "Meeting you again—that's luck."

"To judge by what you have just said, it must be instead a great misfor- tune," she retorted, with a slow smile.

"That is not fair. You know what I mean. Don't imagine I've really for- gotten our first meeting under happier conditions than these. I know I'm not clever. I can't make it sound as I would, but I've thought a great deal of you, Miss Gerson—wondering how you were making it in this great war. Perhaps"— Almer returned at this juncture with the change, which he handed to Wood- house. He was followed in by Lady Crandall, who assured Jane her ham- pers were securely strapped to the dog- cart. Jane attempted an introduction.

"This gentleman has just done me a service, Lady Crandall. May I pre- sent"—

"So sorry. You don't know my name. My clumsiness. Captain Woodhouse." The man bridged the dangerous gap hurriedly. Lady Crandall acknowl- edged the introduction with a gracious smile.

"Your husband is Sir George"— he began.

"Yes; Sir George Crandall, governor general of the Rock. And you?"

"Quite a recent comer. Transferred from the Nile country here. Report to- morrow."

Almer began sliding folding wooden shutters across the back of the street windows. Woodhouse lingered over the excuse of a final cigarette, knowing the moment of his rap- prochement with his fellow Wilhelm- strasse spy was at hand. He was more distraught than he cared to ad- mit even to himself. The day's devel- opments had been startling—first the stunning encounter with Capper there on the very Rock that was to be the scene of his delicate operations—Cap- per, whom he had thought sunk in the oblivion of some Alexandrian wine- shop, but who had followed him on the Princess Mary. The fellow had delib- erately cast himself into his notice, Woodhouse reflected. There had been menace and insolent hint of a power to harm in his sneering oburgation that Woodhouse should remember his name against a second meeting. "Capper— never heard the name in Alexandria, eh?" What could he mean by that if not that somehow the little ferret had learned of his visit to the home of Dr. Koch? And that meant—why, Capper in Gibraltar was as dangerous as a colled cobra!

Then the unexpected meeting with Jane Gerson, the little American he had mourned as lost in the fury of the war. Ah, that was a joy not unminged with regrets! What did she think of him? First, he had been forced coldly to deny the acquaintance that had meant much to him in moments of re- collection; then he had attempted a lame explanation, which explained nothing and must have left her more mystified than before. In fact, he had frankly thrown himself on the mercy of a girl on whom he had not the shad- ow of claim beyond the poor equity of a chance friendship—an incident she might consider as merely one of a day's travel as far as he could know. He had stood before her caught in a deceit, for on the occasion of that never to be forgotten ride from Calais to Paris he had represented himself as hurrying back to Egypt, and here she found him still out of uniform and in a hotel in Gibraltar.

Beyond all this, Jane Gerson was go- ing to the governor's house as a guest. She, whom he had forced, ever so caval- ierly, into a promise to keep secret her half knowledge of the double game he was playing, was going to be on the intimate ground of association with the one man in Gibraltar who by a crook of his finger could end suspicion by a firing squad. This breezy little baggage from New York carried his life balanced on the rosy tip of her tongue. She could be careless or she could be indifferent. In either case it would be bandaged eyes and the click of shells going home for him.

It was Almer who interrupted Wood- house's troubled train of thought.

"Captain Woodhouse will report for signal duty on the Rock tomorrow, I suppose?" he insinuated, coming down to where Woodhouse was standing be- fore the fireplace. He made a show of tidying up the scattered magazines and folders on the table.

The manure spreader is recommended as more practicable than hand spreading, as no lumps would be left that might smother the wheat.

PLANT DISEASES.

A Heavy Toll Paid by Farmers Each Year.

[Prepared by Wisconsin station.]

The farmers of this country pay a heavy tax each year to plant diseases. Even in Wisconsin, where much attention has been given to improved methods of growing and handling crops, a burdensomely large toll is taken.

The plant pathology department of the experiment station was established to save this loss of time and money. It may be able to help you:

Control cabbage yellows, the disease which nearly put a portion of the state's truck growing belt out of the cabbage raising business. Several hundred pounds of Wisconsin Hollander, the native resistant variety, will be available to growers next spring.

Drive smut from your onion beds. Field demonstrations last year with formalin solution, one ounce to a gallon of water, gave excellent results in checking its spread. It is estimated that experiments in co-operation with certain onion growers gave at a cash outlay of but $4 an actual increase of $100 an acre.

Prevent the spread of grain rust, smut or blight. Practical measures have been worked out to reduce the chances of damage from these grain diseases by seed disinfection and rotation.

Control pea blight. Learn what can be done through seed selection, crop rotation and sanitary measures.

Fight late blight and the scab and scurf diseases of potatoes. In doubt as to the particular potato disease which has reduced your yield this year submit samples of the stock to the department for inspection.

This Coupon is for Every Farmer who is willing to use Help

The Empire must be Fed or we lose this War

As the District Representative of the Department of Agriculture I have orders to do my utmost, amongst other duties, to encourage production of Farm Products and particularly to assist in securing a supply of farm labour.

By a system, I report on both the available supply of labour and the local demand. If the demand exceeds the local supply I have the whole Province to draw on, through the Ontario Government Public Employment Bureaux which I represent in this District, and I will do my utmost to see that my District is supplied.

I am satisfied that if the farmers in my District who are anxious to fill a patriotic duty and take advantage of the strong demand there is and will be for every pound of food stuff that can be produced—want or will use the available labour, they can get good help by filling in, clipping out and mailing the above Coupon. But you should do it today.

The Mother-land sorely needs food.

Where is the Labour coming from? Everywhere.

It is streaming in to us from all quarters. Thanks to the deep interest shown by the Department of Agriculture, the Public Employment Bureaux, the Organization of Resources Committee, Boards of Trade, etc., a sweeping campaign has been carried on in the Cities, Towns, etc., to arouse the people to a sense of the duty they owe to the Farmer and to themselves to place hand and mind in readiness for a call to work on the land this season.

High School boys, retired farmers, teamsters, warehousemen and business men in thousands, preferably those who were raised on farms, are being lined up.

We are taking great care to impress on them that this means work—not a holiday—and they will all understand this thoroughly. In most cases the workers will be actuated by fine patriotic motives, ready to work and work hard.

This is a sincere endeavor to co-operate with the farmers to increase food production. We know you Farmers will do your part.

Our boys at the Front must not go hungry.

It would be a very good plan for arrange to have their holidays at a time when they could visit their and help along the patriotic work of producing everything possible.
